Labor Day in the United States
During Listening

In the United States, Labor Day is in September. It is always celebrated on the first Monday in September. It is a public holiday. It celebrates all workers. These workers build a better country. People do not work on Labor Day, but they still get paid.

Labor Day is always part of a three-day weekend. People use the weekend to celebrate the end of summer. Some people go on short trips. Some people have parties. Some people go camping.

Labor Day also celebrates the new school year for children. Children start school on Tuesday, the day after Labor Day. They start a new school year. For example, an eight year old starts third grade. Sometimes people use Labor Day weekend to go shopping for new school things. They buy new notebooks, new pens, new clothes, and new shoes. It is an exciting time for children.
